

The second volume of The Teacher's Ethos: Reflections on Meaningful Education with Selected Summaries offers a distinctive continuation of a project devoted to exploring the mission and identity of the teaching profession. This collection presents selected transcripts of talks – now available in English – that reflect the spirit of an ongoing dialogue about the values that shape education. Contributions from educators, scholars, cultural figures, and advocates together create a rich, multifaceted portrait of the teacher's ethos. Their reflections engage with core educational concerns: responsibility, freedom, authority, relationships with pupils, personal development, and ethical aspects of teaching. This volume is intended for international readers interested in Polish educational thought, as well as for anyone seeking to view education through the lens of universal human values.
